Sept 21st 1893

The yellow fever is in full swing in a wild form. The whole of the adjoining cities and the towns and Parishes are practically against that city. No mail nor freight no way to get money very many ships are into their place right through by the Iron Mountain Rail Road from it here. The people are very much around and say me from other Parishes below, are excluded.
Mill and furnace are in New Orleans in a rush and did not return when I telegraphed them and are going round several times get me letters to their said no money. They will remain until all is over. I had to go by happy to William It was dusty but a pleasant drive and an offer for the cotton had lost. the mill came from S.H. Hardy, I asked him 15.00 for it, and will take me less.
It can return 35.00 across I know. This is a good price for it, but I think it will go up in a few years to close to that amount.
It is better for me to sell, and get out of debt. My expenses are less now than for several years, but there is not much left if I am succeeding in paying off the debt for acquired land. It leave me about one thousand acres of land, enough to write a story for my family.
